

Fig. 225. ON THE ROAD TO TOGHRAK-KUDUK.

prints behind them. At intervals it was diversified by small hills with dead kamisch, while to the north were patches of still living vegetation and mounds crowned by still living tamarisks. To the south were several gigantic yellow clay terraces, and beyond them continuous drift-sand. Our route ran towards the west-south-west across schor, thinly dotted about with kamisch. Connected sand came quite close to us

Fig. 226. PROJECTING PART OF THE TERRACE NOT FAR FROM TOGHRAK-KUDUK.

Hedin, Journey in Central Asia. II.