

gol, Højte-sala, Lu-tschuen-tsa, the pass of Huntsovaguin-kötel, the Chinese name of which is Choang-tso-va; then the mountainous region of Ulan-tologa. The glen of Choang-tso-vaguin-sala joins that of Bing-go, and into this also enters, from the left, that is the west, the glen of Sching-go. Beyond that come the glen of Niu-to, Ma-chung-go, Nukun-bure, Er-to-schui-tsa-le, the pass of Kökö-kötel, Er-to-schuiguin-gol, Sa-go, Ga-tschuen, and finally Tsching-batse, where the upper road joins the track that we followed. Here therefore the foothill range comes to an end; and as for the main range of the system, we have already ascertained that it is pierced by the Mo-baruin-gol not very far south-west of Tsching-ba-dse.

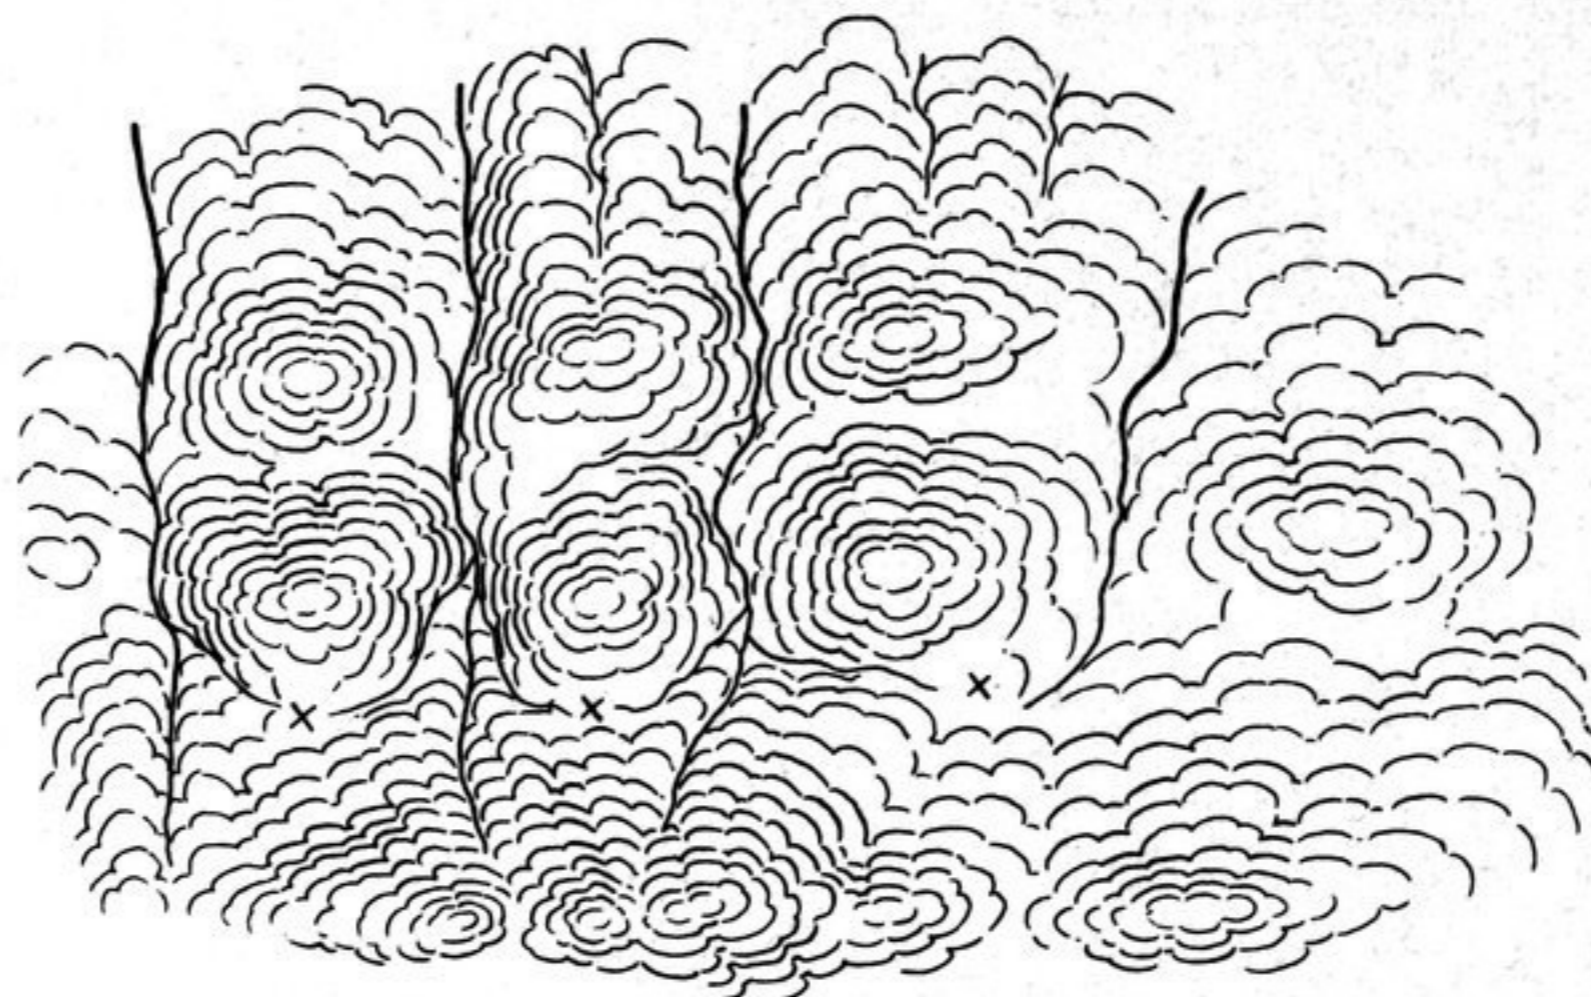

Fig. 306. OROGRAPHICAL SITUATION TO THE NORTH OF ANAMBARUIN-ULA.