

357. TEMUR

temul G temut V themur FB, LT, P, VL; R
temur F, FA, TA¹, TA³, VA tenur FA

Tämür (« iron » in Turk. and Mong.); the name is quite common. This is Chên-chin's (see « Cinchim ») third son, according to Chinese as well as Persian sources. Tämür is the name under which he was known before his accession to the throne (Pa, 263, is quite wrong on that point); when he succeeded Qubilai, he took the title of Öljäitü, « Fortunate » (cf. YS, 18, 1 a; Bl, II, 358), while his posthumous title is 成宗 Ch'êng-tsung, « Perfect Ancestor » (*B*¹, 448, is mistaken on the nature of that title). Tämür, born on October 15, 1265, ascended the throne on May 10, 1294, and died on February 10, 1307.

358. TENDUC

City

tanduc FA tenduc F, FB, L, TA¹, TA³, tenduch LT, VA
tangut VB Z; R trangut V

Province or Plain

candur G tandu FB tenduc F, FB, L, LT, TA¹, chanudue, trangut V tanduc F, FA, FB, L, TA¹, TA³, V, Z; R sandug VB TA³ tenduch LT, P, VA; R senduc F, Fr, t tanduch P, VA tenguc F stangut LT tanguth VL tentuc FAt

There ought to have been no discussion about the name since KLAPROTH, more than a century ago, derived it from 天德軍 T'ien-tê-chün, the « army of T'ien-tê ». But PAUTHIER, though he was faced with a correct interpretation, opposed it at once. In spite of PALLADIUS's additional arguments and of my own indications in JA, 1912, I, 595-596 (alluded to in Y, III, 62, where I am