

No. 7.—A FAMILY SCENE.

THE division of labour is here somewhat one-sided. The woman gains her livelihood and her husband's by washing clothes, and with the aid of her older children, looks after a rapidly increasing family of babies.

The husband, meanwhile, smokes and loafs at home, or spends his wife's money at the opium den. How the children get along is a marvel. They are literally self-educated.