

to any period down to T'ang times during which a settlement was actually in existence at the site. Archaeological evidence as regards such late occupation is at present confined to the T'ang coin which, as previously mentioned, was discovered on the top of a refuse layer near the shrine Ying. i. <sup>12</sup> But we shall have occasion to see that there is further evidence of such continued occupation in a notice in Li Tao-yüan's commentary on the Shui ching composed in the first quarter of the sixth century. This notice bears directly on the identification of the site and will therefore best be discussed in connexion with a wider topographical question.
