

When later corrections were made by tying to known points at the ends of the journey over the unexplored region, and checked by corrected, intermediate latitudes,¹ a fairly good result was reached.

¹ Meridian passages of the sun were observed, declination being calculated, after return to civilisation, based on approximate longitudes.