

British policy, author's summary of, as relating to Tibet, 254; official statement of, 323
 British, withdrawal of, from Tibet, 257
 Bryce, James, remarks of, concerning Tibet, 290
 Buddha, statue of, at Ladak Leh, 128; statue of, carved in living rock, 133; certain of his dogmas compared with those of Christ, 168; non-militant character of his religion, 170; where his creed is now found, 171; reported persecution of Buddhism in Tibet, 192; doctrines of, reach China through Turkestan, 266

C

Camel, deceptive appearance of, as transport, 180
 Caravan compared to railway, 181
 China, present weakness and possible strength of, 40; attack upon, by Tibetans, 190; treaty with Tibetans, 191; beginning of present Tibetan suzerainty, 193; definite triumph of, in Tibet, 197; relations with Great Britain concerning Tibet, 211; her power in Tibet threatened by recent events, 232, 237; her prestige shaken in Central Asia, 241; may slowly awaken Tibet, 253
 Chortens, numbers of, in Tibet, 121
 Chumbi Valley, occupation of, 258
 Christ, life of, considered, 100
 Christianity known in China in seventh century, 267
 Chronometer, loss of, 75

Convention, between China and Great Britain, 1890, text of, 291 et seq.; regulations affecting the preceding, 296
 Correspondence, suggestion as to method of, 294; with Tibet, report from Calcutta on, 303
 Corruption, official, in America and Asia compared, 162
 Crows, Achbar's description of, 103
 Curzon, Lord, his statement concerning mission to Tibet, 307; expresses contempt for military strength of Tibet, 309; declares against occupation of Tibetan territory, 310; reports on battle of Guru, 314; Act of Grace published by, 322; objects to retirement of British from Tibet, 323
 Czar, Tibetan gifts to, arouse British suspicions, 238

D

Dak-bungalow, how used in Himalayas, 131
 Dalai Lama, his relation to Pantchen Lama, 172; chosen when a babe, 174; first use of that term, 195; probable return of, to Lhasa, 239
 Darius, effort by, to conquer Turkestan, 263
 Demarcation of frontier, not specifically provided for, 299
 Desgodins, Abbé, his criticisms of Tibetans, 208
 Desidiri, Father, his stay in Lhasa, 197
 Discord probably established by British in Tibet, 241