

as well as on each side, and with no straight wall anywhere to catch the wind.

Rather unusual articles of equipment were two water-casks, which we filled with water daily on the march, so that if, as sometimes happened, we lost our way and missed the well, or found it choked with sand, we should always have something to fall back on.