

in my journey through to India was accomplished. The dreariness and dangers of the desert were left behind, and new experiences, new races of men, new modes of travelling and changing types of country now lay before me.