

PREFACE

I have felt it to be the duty to record my personal observations to those kind friends who have bestowed their personal care on these papers. Mr. J. S. Cotton has edited the volume and in the great favour of revising my manuscript with regard to the needs of the general reader; he has also kindly done much for the publisher's request with the preparation of the paper and the printing.
I trust will give the work a wide circulation of benefit to the cause of the oppressed. I have not been able to do more than to give a general outline of the subject, and to point out the various questions which are connected with it. I have not been able to do more than to give a general outline of the subject, and to point out the various questions which are connected with it.

It is the duty of every individual to be acquainted with the rights and wrongs of his fellow-men.
It is the duty of every individual to be acquainted with the rights and wrongs of his fellow-men.
It is the duty of every individual to be acquainted with the rights and wrongs of his fellow-men.

THE AUTHOR'S ADDRESS
No. 10, South Street, New York.