

Bulgárh—Cross a river—Baláug—Naráin.

Ghódna.

Kúgna.

Sáran.

Chúr Peak, $30^{\circ} 52' \cdot 3$; $77^{\circ} 27' \cdot 9\delta$; 11,982 ft.

Two other routes, about which no details are known to me, are the following:—

Símla.

Fágú (with a bángalo).

Burg.

Púru.

Dhár.

Camp.

Chúr Peak.

Simla.

Fágú.

Baddául.

Deár.

Pattarnálla.

Kágri.

Sára.

Chúr Peak.

Fágú, with a bángalo (8,053 ft.), 14 miles from Símla; road follows generally the main range, seldom at any distance from its crest—Theog (8,018 ft.), 8 miles from Fágú.

Mattiána, with a very good bángalo (8,027 ft.), 15 miles from Fágú. (Símla to Mattiána can be done in one march, but it is only possible by posting horses).

Nagkánda, $31^{\circ} 14'$; $77^{\circ} 27'$, with a bángalo (8,831 ft.).

Route

from SÍMLA to NAINITÁL,

see NAINITÁL to SÍMLA.

Route No. 192.

From SÍMLA (Símla) to SÁIRI (Simla).

A principal route, passable for horses.

Literature: Year-book of the Pánjab for 1853.

Maps: Indian Atlas, sheet 47 (second edition).

Simla, $31^{\circ} 6' \cdot 2$; $77^{\circ} 9' \cdot 4\delta$; 7,156 ft. (church); hôtel and club—Mahássu (8,277 ft.)—Kápri Háthi.

Fágú, with a bángalo (8,053 ft.), 14 miles from Símla—Rahog—Tatgárh—Cross a small nálah.

Paráli, with a bángalo, 10 miles from Fágú (an easy march)—Cross the Gíri river—Chol—Chíjoli.

Kot, or Kotái, 11 miles from Paráli—Jácholi.

Deóra, 15 miles from Kot (few villages on the road itself during this march)—Jábal—Chúa.

Sáiri, $31^{\circ} 8'$; $77^{\circ} 45'$, 9 miles from Deóra.

Route No. 191.

From SÍMLA (Símla) to NAGKÁNDA (Símla).

A principal route, passable for horses. Excellent made road.

Literature: Gerard's Koonawur, pp. 195-204.—Jacquemont's Journal, Vol. II., pp. 178-84.—Russell's Diary, Vol. II., p. 158.—Tables of Routes and stages, pp. 316, 317.—Thomson's Western Himálaya, pp. 30-41.

Maps: Indian Atlas, sheet 47 (second edition).

Simla, $31^{\circ} 6' \cdot 2$; $77^{\circ} 9' \cdot 4\delta$; 7,156 ft. (church); hôtel and club—Mahássu (8,277 ft.)—Kápri Háthi.