

- Tāj, or Tājmahál, at Ágra, Lat. 27°, Long. 78° تاج محل Pers. Arab.
 “Crown, or Crown place.” The celebrated and most beautiful mausoleum of Shajehán and Arjimánd Bánu. Mahál is very vaguely employed for place, district, estate.
 Anal. Táj-pur, in Bengál, Lat. 27°, Long. 87°.
- Takht-i-Sulaimán, a mountain in Kashmír, Lat. 34°, Long. 75° تخت سليمان Arab., with Pers. poss. affix.
 “Sulaimán’s, Solimán’s, Solomon’s throne.”
 A peak of the same name near the right bank of the Indus, Lat. 31°, Long. 69°.
- Tálong, in Bhután, Lat. 27°, Long. 92° རྩ་ལོང་ rta-long. Tib.
 “Opportunity for horses.” Rta, horse; long, or long-ba, to seize; opportunity; the form len-pa is now more in use.
- Tálu-ka river, Míshmi and Síngpho name for Brahmapútra, q. v.
- Tamrachéri, or Tămbărchéri, in Málabar,
 Lat. 11°, Long. 76° ताम्रचेरी तम्र चिरी Hind. (Sansk.) Tam.
 “Copper-town.”
- Tamrapáni ताम्रपाणि Sanskr.
 “Copper-hand.” The ancient name of Ceylon, q. v.; the Greek Taprobane. For the legends connected with it and further modifications of the name, see Lassen, Ind. Alt., Vol. I., p. 201.
- Tanggálla, see Gálle.
- Tápti, a river in Central India तपती तपति Sanskr., Hind.
 “The heating.”
 It seems to be named after Tápati, daughter of the sun-god; the natives also referred it to the high temperature of the water.
- Taragárh, in Sėrhínd, Lat. 39°, Long. 76° تارا گڑھ Pers. Hind.
 “Star fort.” The same name in the Pănjáb, Lat. 32°, Long. 75°.
 Anal. Tara-ghát, star-pass, in Bahár, Lat. 25°, Long. 82°; Tara-kót, in Oríssa, Lat. 20°, Long. 86°; Tara-púr, in the Dėkhan, Lat. 17°, Long. 75°; in the Kónkan, Lat. 19°, Long. 72°; in Hindostán, Lat. 29°, Long. 78°.
- Tarái, a tract of land along the southern border of the Himálaya. तराई Hind., Sanskr.
 “Low lands.” Its Sanskrit name, Tareyáni, is derived by Hodgson from a Tămul word, tar, meaning, to be low, with the affixed Tămul termination -ei-, and the Sanskr. -ni.—Madden, Journ. As. Soc. Beng., Vol. XVIII., p. 446, connects it with the Persian word tári, moisture, water; or with the Hindi túle, low.